

The Answer is Blowing in the Wind (8/30/22)

President Biden was recently asked on CNN if it were time for him to visit the border. He replied that he thought he might go there. It doesn't appear that he will get around to the visit any time soon.

The question: How many deaths will it take till he knows that too many people have died? The answer my friend is...

He will only go if he is forced to, or his handlers believe in would be good for the midterm elections. After all, the border is secure, just ask them.

Without the general media attention (CNN, N.Y. Times, Washington Post), we will continue to ignore the human tragedy. It seems it's all tied up in politics. N.Y. and D.C. mayors are outraged that Texas is shifting a small portion of the burden on them. The mayors might get the President's attention. The monthly increase in immigrants being brought up north is approximately equal to the daily influx hitting Texas.

Hard question: Where do you draw the line? When does the issue rise to a level that gets your attention? 5000, 6000, 10,000 deaths? Both parties can do something about this, but it will take a concerted effort on our part to move the needle and force their hand.
