

If a Tree Falls in the Forest...

6/30/23

President Biden might be in more trouble than his general supporters think. If a tree falls in a forest and no one hears, did the tree fall?

Up until the last two weeks, the charges against the President and his business relationship with his son has been largely a Republican issue, and even there it has been led by the stauncher conservatives within the party. T.V. stations outside of Fox News have ignored it, as have the broader media like the New York Times and reporters in general. No story here.

In the past two weeks, things seem to be changing. The whistle blowers (not just one) seem credible (the burden of proof is on them) they seem to be having an impact. The N.Y. Times had a front-page story today and the press besides Fox at the news conferences have started to ask hard questions.

The issue is out of the forest and is starting to see some light of day. It needs to be resolved one way or the other. The uncertainty is further undermining our faith in our institutions.
